DCWA Newsletter – August 2016

The Duck Creek Watershed Assembly had a successful volunteer drive this summer. An appeal went out to lake residents adjacent to Duck Lake, for the purpose of asking for volunteers to donate their time (and lake access & boat) to help conduct water quality monitoring projects. We are very thankful to the four people who stepped up to the task! Frank & Sue Bednarek and Glenn & Meg Eaton have been extremely helpful over the summer!

Boat Captain Frank Bednarek navigates the luxe pontoon out to the proper GPS coordinates of Duck Lake; and Sue Bednarek, Glenn Eaton, & Meg Eaton assist in the various monitoring responsibilities. Thanks also to watershed members Tom Tissue, Glenn Hayden, and Lynn Knopf who continue to assist.

Water Quality monitoring is a lot easier with a nice, roomy boat, docked directly on the lake! Tom Tissue has wrestled his kayak from the public access point; and Glenn Hayden's little boat has often been filled to capacity to get the job done. So we are very grateful for the convenience and expertise provided by our new volunteers!

The Eaton's and Bednarek's have learned that there is more to water quality testing than scooping some water into a jar. But they are mastering the scientific methods.

The tests include: Chlorophyll-a sampling; Dissolved Oxygen & Total Phosphorus monitoring; Temperature measurement; Transparency testing; and Invasive Plants survey.

These monitoring activities follow protocols developed by the Michigan Clean Water Corps (MiCorps) for use by volunteer groups statewide. These responsibilities are conducted in compliance with MiCorps and include quality assurance provisions that help ensure the reliability and comparability of the data produced. Go to micorps.net if you would like more information.
